THINK KINDRED MAY BE AT PLATTSBURG

Police Now Believe Missing Cashier Has Gone to Training Camp.

DRUGS IN HIS ROOMS

While the police, in their search for Edward C. Kindred, indicted on the charge of stealing $22,000 last Wednesday from Booth & Flinn, contractors, of 17 Battery place, have not lost sight of the possibility that the missing man was the victim of foul play, their latest theory based on the assumption that he stole the money is that he may have gone to the professional and business men's military camp at Plattsburg.

This theory was strengthened by a letter received from Saratoga by a man who said that although he did not know Rindred he was sure he had seen him at the races last Saturday. Kindred's at the races last Saturday. Kindred's hobby was shooting, at which he is an expert with rifle and revolver, and the police believe it is possible that he may have joined the Plattsburg camp, expecting to devote the coming fortnight to his favorite sport. The Plattsburg police have been notified of this theory and pictures of Kindred have been sent to them.

Deputy Sheriff Leslie examined again yesterday the belongings Kindred left be-hind him in his apartment at 560 West 163d street, and among other things found seven empty bottles which Leslie and the police say formerly contained morphine. The theory that Kindred might have been a drug user is strengthened by statements of his office associates that sometimes he was meek, almost cringing in manner, and that at other cringing in manner, and that at other times he came down to the office "like a soaring lion," officious and self-important, and ordering his equals around as if he owned the place.

Three shotguns and four rifles were also found, and 2,500 cartridges. All the goods, which have been attached by Booth.

the goods, which have been attached by Booth & Flinm, were sent to a storage warehouse. It is estimated that they are worth about $3,000, including an automatic plane and the two automobiles. No trace of the safe deposit box
